Suzanne Pearson, a Delegate of the Blessed Karl League for the US and Canada will also give talks. Visit the sites connected to the Imperial Family in Madeira. See the Port where Emperor Karl and Zita (who was expecting their eighth child), first saw the island after a three-week harrowing sea voyage. After the second failed attempt to reclaim Hungary, the Imperial couple was placed in the custody of the Entente, who banished them onto a British gunboat departing from Baja, Hungary, on Nov. 1st, 1921, destination unknown. Up until then, no country offered to take them. After traversing the treacherous wartime waters of the Danube, Sea of Marmara, the Dardanelles, the Mediterranean and the Strait of Gibraltar, the Captain finally received orders to drop them off on the Portuguese Island of Madeira. Arriving on Nov. 19, 1921, worn out physically and heartbroken at being cut off from his children and his people, the Emperor was comforted by the sight of a church jutting out of the hillside, saying to Zita, "It reminds me very much of our churches back home. I'm certain it's a church of Our Lady. We'll go there soon.." Indeed, it was dedicated to Our Lady of the Mountain and ended up being very much a part of the Emperor's story to this day! Visit the grounds of Reid's Palace Hotel, former site of the Villa Victoria, their first dwelling. In January, Zita traveled to Europe to pick up their seven children and bring them to the island. By her return in early February, Karl had accepted an offer of the Quinta do Monte, a summer villa in the hills above the city. It was without electricity and heating and had little running water, but with their dwindling funds and credit, Karl was thankful to have a place for the family. In the dampness of early March, he caught a cold that soon turned into pneumonia. By the time a doctor could see him, an infection had spread and no treatment helped. Visit the grounds of this villa and hear accounts of those last days. Even in his illness the Emperor never lost sight of his duty, telling Zita, "I must suffer as much as it takes so that my people can come together again." On April 1, 1922, at thirty-four years of age, he took his last breath, returning his soul to God. He is entombed at the church of Nossa Senhora do Monte as he requested. At the time of his death he was considered a saint, even by his enemies. Within one year the archbishop of Vienna was petitioned to open a cause for his canonization. The Emperor Karl League of Prayer for Peace among Nations, formed when Karl was a boy to pray for his protection, was appointed by the archbishop to promote the cause. By the time of WWII over ten-thousand miracles had been reported. In 2004 he was beatified. Empress Zita lived sixty-seven more years after Karl. A cause was opened for her beatification, in keeping with the promise that she and Karl made to help each other get to Heaven. See a photographic exhibition at the church of Nossa Senhora do Monte telling of the Imperial Family's life on the island.
